EDWARD, KING OF ENGLAND AND EMPEROR OF INDIA

London Celebrates the Event for Which the World Has Waited as Perhaps for No Other Coronation.

Pathetic Incident Marks Festivities—Aged Bishop of Canterbury Swoons While Preparing to Crown H's
Majesty—King Tenderly Assists Him—Father Embraces Son.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Edward VII. R. I. by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, was today crowned, and tonight London is noisily celebrating the event for which the world has waited as, perhaps, it never awaited another coronation.

In all respects the celebration was impressive and it was carried out with the perfection of every detail and lack of accidents that has rarely characterized similar displays. Earl Roberts, commander-in-chief of the forces, was once more the hero of the hour, and next to the king himself received the heartiest welcome of the assembled crowds, and at various points along the route of the procession Lord Kitchener received thunderous ovations.

But it was for the king and queen themselves that the people really felt themselves loose. Whenever and wherever their majesties were seen the cheers were loud and long and especially was this so on the return journey of the king and queen to the Buckingham Palace.

Until the booming of guns announced that the crowning of King Edward and Queen Alexandra had been achieved there lingered in thousands of minds the nervous apprehension that even at the last moment some untoward event might once more plunge the nation into consternation. When this was passed the unrestrained jubilation was as much a tribute to the king's personal popularity as it was an evidence of relief from the tension of last week. While the scenes in the streets were robbed of the many elements that usually accompany a great pageant, they will long be remembered by those who stood on the stand, at the windows and on the sidewalks to see King Edward after he had won almost from the jaws of his crown.

In Westminster Abbey the scene was nothing less than marvellous. Nearly 7000 members of the nobility, clergy and gentry had gathered with the foreign princes, ambassadors, colonist rulers, Indian potentates and leaders from the furthest quarter of the globe to do honor to the king. Two incidents in the service in the abbey will live in the memory of all who witnessed them. The first of these centered around the aged Archbishop of Canterbury. From the commencement of the service the archbishop had the greatest difficulty in reading or remembering the prayers, and when he came to place the crown upon King Edward's head it was discovered that he had the crown back to front. A few minutes later came the climax of his feebleness. He was kneeling to do the first homage of all the subjects of the king when suddenly he almost fainted and would have fallen upon the sovereign's knees had not King Edward tenderly grasped both the prelate's hands and lifted him to his feet. The tremor which this event caused had scarcely subsided when another exquisitely human touch varied the proceedings and the king was forgotten in the father. Instead of merely receiving the homage of the Prince of Wales, King Edward put his arms around the prince and kissed him, and then recalled him and wrung his hand with the manliness of parental affection that brought tears to many eyes.

To those who were able to see clearly these two episodes, the magnificence of bejeweled women, the splendor of the uniforms, even the historic granur of the coronation office itself sank almost in secondary interest.

No stage effect could have equalled the climax that ensued the moment the crown was placed upon the king's head. The sudden illumination by hundreds of electric lights making the thousands of priceless jewels, including those in the crown itself, to sparkle with a dazzling brilliancy. The instantaneous movement of the peeresses in the placing of their coronets upon their heads, the choir's loud "God Save the King," with its refrain from thousands of throats, constituted such an outburst of pent-up thankfulness and rejoicing as even Westminster Abbey, with all its hostile traditions, has never before witnessed.

IRELAND SEPARATES HERSELF FOR CORONATION FESTIVITIES

DUBLIN, Aug. 9.—At a meeting of the Irish national party today, John Redmond said the party had formally withdrawn from participation in the coronation celebration and had assembled for the purpose of protesting against the usurpation of the Irish government by England. King Edward, he added, was not the constitutional monarch of Ireland. The resolution adopted declared that "Ireland separates herself from the coronation rejoicing of her mercenary oppressors and stands apart in her rightful discontent and disaffection."

PROGRAM OF DAY.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Although the doors of Westminster Abbey were opened at 7 o'clock this morning few participants in the ceremonies attendant upon the coronation of King Edward arrived until considerably after that hour.

By 8 o'clock, most of the best positions along the route of the procession were occupied and the streets were paced with carriages, state coaches and bands. The seats of the abbey were filling slowly at 8 o'clock. The early comers spent their time in scrutinizing their surroundings and their neighbors through opera glasses, with which nearly all present were provided. Peeresses sat chatting, holding fast their coronets, which even thus early appeared to have become somewhat of a nuisance.

VISITORS STAND ALL NIGHT TO GUARD THEIR POSITIONS

LONDON, Aug. 9.—A brilliant sunrise promised perfect weather for coronation day, but long before the ceremonies commenced threatening clouds gathered and the early arrivals on the route of the procession came provided against contingencies. The earlier crowds were in no wise as large as it had been generally anticipated they would be. Many enthusiasts with camp stools and ample supplies of provender had spent the night on the best coigns of vantage that could be secured and were in the same positions at 8 o'clock this morning. At that hour the troops began to take up their allotted stations and policemen, three paces apart, lined the route of the procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey. Up to 7 o'clock there were certainly more police than sightseers visible, but after that time there was a rapid increase in the number of spectators, suburban trains and tram cars emptying thousands of persons every few minutes into the stations adjacent to the procession's route. East End Londoners also flocked westward in such numbers that the streets of Temple Bar became oppressively silent and deserted.

Most of the best positions along the route were thickly crowded by 8, and the spectators were furnished with plenty of diversion by the marching and countermarching of the troops, headed by their bands and quickly passing state coaches, private carriages and automobiles. Buckingham Palace, naturally was one of the principal centers of interest as it was the starting point of the great pageant. Crowds assembled there in immense numbers and the first hearty cheer of the day went up when the news was circulated that King Edward was in the best of health and spirits and well equipped to undergo the fatigue of the day.

By 9:20 the scene in the vicinity of the palace and the Mall was extremely animated. The roof of the palace and those of all surrounding buildings were crowded with spectators and the constantly arriving members of the royal family with their suites and the appearance of other participants in the procession elicited cheers those varying in degree to the popularity of the personages recognized by the people. The Duke of Connaught who rode down the Mall in an automobile for the purpose of seeing that the military arrangements along the route were complete, was heartily cheered.

Almost as animated was the scene in the vicinity of Westminster Abbey, where bands of music stationed about the building relieved the tedium of the early waiting and soon after the doors were opened state coaches, carriages and automobiles rattled up in a ceaseless line, the rich apparel of their occupants eliciting hearty approval which, however, was surpassed by the reception accorded to the men of the naval brigade as they marched past at a swiftness to take up a favored position guarding the route near the Abbey. The Colonial Premiers and the Privy Councilors were warmly welcomed, the Pijans, in pet and a red Indian chief, in his native costume, feathers and blanket, decorated with the customary mirrors caused the most lively amusement. As the hour appointed for the departure of the royal procession approached the excitement about Buckingham Palace was most marked. Musical ensembles in the advance guard of the royal cavalcade issued from the archway, the horses of the troopers curvetting nimbly as they faced the wall of humanity that cheered their coming. Shortly afterwards came the Prince and Princess of Wales's procession and finally within a few minutes their majesty's state coach appeared.
